Sara represents businesses and individuals in the automotive, distributing, and franchise industries. She represents national, regional, and local motor vehicle dealership clients in consumer class actions and complex litigation, federal and state regulatory matters, unfair competition claims, commercial and consumer litigation, and franchise disputes. She has handled a variety of commercial disputes, including breach of contract, franchise terminations, product liability, unfair competition, unfair and deceptive trade practices, real estate disputes, wage and hour disputes, and insurance coverage disputes.

A significant portion of Sara's practice is devoted to representing motor vehicle dealers in trade regulatory matters. Her dealer clients rely on her for sound advice and counsel with respect to franchise matters, including dealer appointments, dealer protests, dealer relocations, dealer buy/sell agreements, and dealership terminations. Sara also assists dealers with advertising compliance, consumer disputes and programs mandated by the manufacturer, such as mandatory facilities upgrade and image programs. She helps dealers understand their rights under state and federal laws which protect dealership operations.

Sara is also an experienced class action defense attorney. Her experience includes defending businesses against consumer and employment related class action claims. She routinely counsels her motor vehicle dealer clients on wage and hour issues, including the revision of pay plans and employee classification disputes. She also defends companies during Attorney General investigations and audits.

When it comes to motor vehicle dealership terminations, Sara understands that dealers need to be aggressive to preserve the dealership. Sara uses her extensive business litigation experience to defend dealerships that are pressured unfairly by the manufacturer. She understands the sales performance metrics relied upon by manufacturers in terminations and she helps dealers defend against accusations of poor sales performance. One of the biggest hurdles that dealers face is getting their manufacturer to understand the realities of the local market, which can differ significantly from the manufacturer's expectations. Sara uses years of experience to advocate on behalf of dealers in a way that helps preserve the dealers' relationship with the factory going forward.
